PROGRAMME DESCRIPTION

The Honours programme in Curatorship is offered by the Michaelis School of Fine Art’s Centre for Curating the Archive in close collaboration with Iziko Museums.

The programme offers courses in the theory and practice of curatorship, developing in students a sophisticated awareness of the practicalities, politics and poetics of working with collections of many kinds. Students are encouraged to bring the disciplinary insights of their undergraduate major (whether this be in the visual arts, the humanities or the sciences) to the curating of both material and virtual collections, and are offered opportunities to work on exhibitions in real spaces and in the digital realm. A major aim of this programme is to introduce students, through seminars, fieldwork and workshops, to the central skills of a curator: to understand objects and how to research them, to work with collections, articulating them in exhibitions, and to collaborate with artists, mediating their production.

The course prepares students for further postgraduate study or possible work as curators, museum educators, collection managers and for positions that require the use, interpretation, display and manipulation of collections.

PROGRAMME STRUCTURE

Compulsory components
- Critical thinking in curatorship
- Research essay/project

Elective courses (three required)
- Practical communication
- Working with museum collections
- Virtual display
- Local issues in curatorship

Other possible electives
An elective from another humanities faculty honours course may be chosen where appropriate to replace one of the above with permission from the programme conveners, Professor Pippa Skotnes and Carine Zaayman.

Workshops
A range of compulsory introductory and specialist workshops will be offered in the fields of curation and conservation.

Internships
The programme includes a mandatory sixty-hour internship where students are expected to acquire basic skills. Students’ performance is evaluated by internal and external supervisors. A list of offerings at Iziko and UCT would be provided to students at the beginning of the academic year.

Field trips and study visits
First-hand encounters with collections, curators and public sites of memory are an integral part of our programme and the learning experience on offer. These faculty-led visits include day trips to venues such as the District Six Museum, the South African Rugby Museum, Solms Delta, Prestwich Memorial, among others.

The programme continues to send students on a fully-funded, annual international field trip, exposing each class to a range of institutional and independent practitioners, as well as an array of exhibition models and collections. By way of facilitators, students are encouraged to participate in intense discussion and critical reflection on these encounters.

ADMISSIONS

Academic criteria
Applications are invited from students who have completed an undergraduate degree in the visual arts or cognate fields, including such disciplines as art history, archaeology, visual studies, history and anthropology, as well as any of the sciences, who are interested in the work of a curator and curatorship, museology and working with collections.

Applicants are required to submit hard copies of the following before 31 October 2016:
- a detailed narrative curriculum vitae;
- a letter of no more than two pages detailing your background and reasons for wishing to study curatorship, as well as your special areas of interest relevant to the programme;
- academic transcripts;
- the names and contact details of two academic referees;
- a sample piece of academic writing;
- 500-word research proposal

POSTGRADUATE BURSARIES

A limited number of department bursaries are available to South African citizens. Preference will be given to designated groups. Candidates should motivate to this effect when applying.

Given that the support we are able to offer is limited, it is recommended that prospective students pursue other avenues, namely general university funding as well as the National Arts Council of South Africa. For more information about postgraduate funding offered by the university, please see http://www.uct.ac.za/apply/funding/postgraduate/awards/research
